Speaker Teixeira said that the Dean for the college of Liberal Arts came to speak to the members of the Senate.

The Dean of Liberal Arts thanked the Senate for inviting her to speak. She also gave a shout out to the senators from the College of Liberal Arts. They are all terrific and she has enjoyed working with them.

Dean Deborah Modellmog. She doesn't read or watch Harry Potter so she didn't know what being called a Harry Potter Dean meant but she will bring a wizard hat and wand to graduation. Dean of liberal arts includes Humanities, Arts, and Social Sciences. She was a professor of English at Ohio State and also the Associate Dean of Humanities as well as the Chair for English and she was Director of an organization called Diversity and Identity Studies Collected at OSU which was called DISCO. She was also the founder and co-organizer of the Sexual Studies Program. She had an administrative background and looked forward to doing that here. She was impressed ASUN's work. The first thing she did at UNR was attend a faculty Senate meeting. She was also showed the film with President Boone and was blown away with what they do and the resources they have. She had a commitment to connect the university to the community and applauded them. The Dean of Liberal Arts said she never saw a student association do that. If they didn't know, her department oversaw about 14 programs and 8 programs and centers including Anthropology, Arts, Communications Studies, Criminal Justice, English, History, Military Science, Music, Philosophy, Political Science, Psychology, Sociology, Theater, Dance, World Languages and Literature. Programs and centers they work with are: Social Research Justice Studies, Core Humanities Program, Race and Identity Studies, Center for Justice Studies, Judicial Studies, and Latino Research Center. They are the largest college at the university, which is often true around the country. She oversees a lot of programs and people but was up to the task and excited to get started. She had ambitious plans for her college, some are being processed with college leaders and committees and college advisory committee. Given her limited time, the first area for development was advocating for the College of Liberal Arts. It wasn't a big issue here but in some universities, people are starting to lose an understanding of the value of liberal arts. An example of that was STEM education. It is vital, but not at the expense of the humanities. An article she read argued that it was great to have doctors and engineers but if they forget the humanities, they will not be at the cutting end of research or development. They make the argument that jobs are changing at a rapid pace and the job they have now will not be the same job in a couple of years. The Dean of Liberal Arts said that we need people with imagination, great creative thinking skills, communication skills and people who have problem solving skills. They will not be able to keep up with the future. Those that are liberal arts students, they are the wave of the future and the hope. She didn't want them to think that their degree is not valuable. They will be desired employee. The liberal arts are key and they cannot forget that. The Governor of Kentucky, who is liberal arts major, said they needed more engineers and not French literary majors. People that look at the future say they need more liberal arts majors, not fewer. If you are majoring in engineering, get a liberal arts background. If you are majoring in liberal arts get a science background as well. Another development area is better preparing students for the careers available to them. The tendency now is to hope that it will work out with no trainings or knowledge of what careers are available. She will make it more visible with classes and opportunities so they can see the wealth of opportunities. Many medical schools are looking for liberal arts majors so they need to have the track to let students get there. The law has always been an avenue for liberal arts and the same with education. The Dean of Liberal Arts said that they are working on a dual degree with education for History, English, and Social Science Majors. Finally, her last area of development was advancing the diversity of the university. When offered the job, asked for 4 jobs in gender, race, and identity studies. They would not be a department but a program so they would have to be having to be half time in GRI and half time in other departments. She will be hiring them and also developing the GRI. Women's study major and a GRI program with minors. She was thinking they will do a GRI major, maybe with different names and with specializations in that program so you can go into Latin Studies, American Studies, Asian American Studies, Native American Studies, Disability Studies, Gender and Sexuality Studies. Also there are thematic areas like Comparative American Ethnic Studies, Social Justice Studies, Peace and Genocide Studies or Religious Studies. There will be a lot of directions students will be able to take. They will also be able to do a specialization; if you can't do a full GRI, you can do a minor. They will become minors and will branch off and grow. Thinking is to get the programs established. Needed to not just change the demographics but also in terms of faculty and staff and make sure that they representing the diversity of the area and the country. The programs also need to show that they are fields that are important for programs they are in could use their help with advice, feedback, and input from them and from students to advocate with universities. May also do some surveys and since students don't always answer them, help with that. Started diversity committee and could be ambassadors for liberal arts even if not part of liberal arts, just being able to say that there is a lot to do with a major that other students may not understand, could be very helpful. The Dean of Liberal Arts said that the college does great research, great teaching, and great public outreach and engagement and that she looks forward to working with all of the Senators and Faculty.

Senator Jordan asked if there will be workshops available to show students what opportunities would be available for those who do not want study after undergraduate school.

Dean Deborah Modellmog said yes. Dean Modellmog said that one of the things that Liberal Arts majors need more than anything is confidence and said that there was a class on careers for english majors which developed into career preparation for english majors and related majors. Students who came out of the program were able to put together a resume, they knew what types of jobs were available for them, they knew how to find internships and how to write a cover letter and they had interviewed skills. After the class, a survey was taken and they were asked about how confident they were and the majority of the students said that they were very confident after taking the class. One student, by the end of the summer had an internship in London, another had an internship with Marvel Comics. The students were very excited about what they had learned in that class. Dean Deborah Modellmog proceeded to say that they are going to do something very similar to that program.

Senator Chiu asked if they had timelines for GRI programs.

Dean Deborah Modellmog said yes; as soon as possible. She will be meeting Monday for the planning committee as well as the three committees that will be collaborating. The GRI framework is already here. She met with all the deans when she first got here and asked what classes they had to fit the program. They might need to figure out prerequisites so they might not all be available to all students. At the beginning, she wanted to see common classes they all took such as power politics and privilege in the United States, or theories of intersectionality which is a type of why to look at identity and culture. At the end wanted, she wanted a capstone experience where you go out and work in the community or do a research project or internship or class project to apply the knowledge. She was hoping for next year but the target date might not be that soon. The faculty and students are all eager though.

Senator Feng said that the College of Science had all freshmen take a class to help them transition to the university. He asked if that as something they could consider.

Dean Deborah Modellmog said it could be something to consider and that there are a lot of students in Liberal Arts, and that they are trying to focus on a Nevada Fit for Liberal Art Programs.

Senator Jordan said asked what format worked best for GRI.

Dean Deborah Modellmog said at that Ohio State, it worked mostly as minors but she wanted to create a big major. They were never able to do it there but as a dean, she has more power and more resources and she will be putting a lot of resources into GRI. They now have a full time administrative assistant, someone who can help her develop the curriculum. UNLV just did something like this so they have to look at what they did; it looks similar to what they are talking about.

Senator Eshenbaugh asked how they could go into the community and find the internship opportunities that are applicable to every field.

Dean Deborah Modellmog said they need to do a lot of that. She talked to the advisory committee and wanted them to help make the connections. She also wanted to get students to show where they wanted to see the internships. They will do a formal program eventually so that students know what internships are available to them. They can also bring internship opportunities to her and they will figure it out; but they will need a more formal way that proves students will do real work and not just answer calls or file papers.

Senator Taylor asked how Dean Deborah Modellmog will reach out to students who believe that if they major in medical related programs they law school is not an option for them.

Dean Deborah Modellmog said she talked to the dean of the med school and they confirmed that the med school at the University that there are courses that are biology related, chemistry, or math courses and that once you do that, you can still be a liberal arts major. One of the complaints that they hear about the medical profession in the United States is that it is too factory like, people do not communicate well, and that it is really hard to reach people. Often, people in the Liberal Arts College have some of those personal people skills that is what med schools are looking for. At Ohio State, they had a program called Medical Humanities and it was designed to take humanities students and help them into med school. They will create advising forms that are for med school and liberal arts and show students the exact courses that are necessary for either Law School or Medical School. Information will be put on the Liberal Arts Website, along with interviews and films to help students.

Speaker Texiera said that the second guess of the night was going to give a presentation on the Civic Learning on Campus and talk about what he does on the campus for civic learning.

Mark Walker was the interim dean and director of Cooperative Extension and the senators that represent them are from CABNR. They just consolidated with the college of agriculture; prior to that they were a stand alone. The interesting thing about cooperative extension is that it is difficult to understand it in a campus setting. He had a BA in English and Journalism and a doctorate for two engineering colleges. The Journalism degree helped him put words into sentences and sentences into paragraphs and paragraphs into a story. That is an under-rated talent in which he thinks is really valuable. He wanted to go over the Land grant system, which was established in 1862 under President Lincoln, which established a college in every state and that the university would grant a land to agriculture. Cooperative extension formed in 1914 to take the information produced by research into communities. Their mission is to connect the community with the campus. The latest version is to bring the community to the campus so they are a part of the students' life. The extension exists in every state territory in the United States. They are funded by three primary sources, which was on a diagram given to the senators, realstate tax, state taxes, and federal funds. Funding has been constant for about 4-5 years. That is an overview of what extension is. Currently they focus on agriculture and natural resources.

Senator Green asked if they could coordinate their volunteerism with GivePulse.

Mr. Walker said they did not.

Speaker Teixeira asked Senator Green to contact Mr. Walker.

Senator Taylor

Mr. Walker said yes. They had new volunteers who started a new program doing robotics. The robotics program was in Elko and Battle Mountain. They were small but all around the state.

Senator Eshenbaugh asked if the grants were being used by undergrads or mostly grad students.

Mr. Walker said there were limitations but there are opportunities through grants for short term projects. They are always looking for eager and enthusiastic people.

Mr. Boulton said he was the president of Omicron Delta Kappa. They were having a bone marrow drive going on and he wanted to invite them. It was super quick and only took about 5 minutes. They just had to sign a form and then swab their cheek and they were done. Then they get put on a registry list and they get called if they ever find someone who is a match but the chances of that happening are rare. He also asked them to spread the word. If anyone was also interested in joining, they were accepting applications until next Monday.

and re-entered the room at 6:10 pm.*

The survey goes out November 1st and they will be adding the game day question. They will be partnering up for tabling in the first two weeks since they have a small staff. They will have a button maker it different sayings; they offered to have the It's on Us logo made as well. They are really pushing for sexual assault to not happen. They will also be adding the It's on Us link on the bottom of the resources. Chief of Staff Atienza and her are also working on tracking to see how many students take the pledge to hit the 1000 goal. - G. Special Committee on Safety, Sustainability, and Wellness-Senator Blair
Senator Blair said the Wolf Pack Wellness Project went well. They gave out 100 goodie bags but if they do the event again, they should give out more bags. The Health Center gave out 100 flu shots. They are interested in doing more tabling at Pennington so they will see what they can do. The fall safety forum will be November 14th in room 423; if they had ideas that would benefit the forum let her know. She did have a meeting with Dr. Hug-English about the hard wavier insurance. She thought they should pursue it as a Senate since it will affect many students in the future. She wanted to see how that might affect students if they don't move towards the waiver but it was hard since they will be getting a new administration. She didn't want to put the burden of research on them since they are biased towards wanting the insurance. She wanted to bring it to them as a Senate to decide if they were okay with possibly adding new student fees.

Speaker Teixeira said he and Senator Blair met and they will do some research and then come back together later. There are many variables, one of which is that they will be getting a new president who might adjust Obamacare and the health care system. They will come back later with recommendations later on. B. AN ACT TO INCREASE THE NUMBER OF INTERNS WITHIN THE JUDICIAL BRANCH

Speaker Teixeira said this was put forth by Senator Macaballug but he had to work tonight so Chief Justice Bruketta will present the bill.

Chief Justice Bruketta said the bill was straightforward. For context, the council used to take on 3 interns but for the last two years they have had none. Their big thing was to develop a program with all the interns and justices hitting the pavement and reaching out to students to make sure they know about the internship to develop future leaders. Right now they had 3 positions but 5 council members and he wanted to increase it so that each member had an intern.

Senator T. Jackson moved to approve SB 84- An Act to Increase the Number of Interns Within the Judicial Branch.

Senator H. Jackson seconded.

Senator H. Jackson asked what some of the plans were for the interns.

Chief Justice Bruketta said the program was not really established before. What they are doing is having biweekly meetings with them and doing workshops. The first one is on what ASUN is and the government branches. Others included the governing documents. Every week they will shadow a justice and help with projects the justices are working on. The projects can be anything but they just need to get some hands-on experience. They are also developing a speaker series to talk about law. The next speaker will be talking about higher education law and he will encourage all interns to attend. All the information laid out in the SAS will be covered.

Senator Jordan asked for specific content besides what's in the SAS.

Chief Justice Bruketta said they had workshops planned for this year and then will re-create the program next year.

Speaker Teixeira said that if they planned on voting no they needed to voice their concerns now.

He wants to ask them how they would like to have a voice within ASUN. All the information he gets will be presented to Senate and they can decide from there.

Senator H. Jackson wanted to be a part of the task force.

Speaker Teixeira said they did not have a meeting time yet since there were so many people but they might end up having two meeting times. He can post a poll on the Facebook page.

B. Senator Reports

19. COMMENTS AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Senator Crupi said that anyone interested in learning about parliamentary procedures, he will be giving a presentation to the secretaries at their weekly meeting next Tuesday at 7 pm. The new senators or anyone who wanted to brush up was welcome to go. The secretaries functioned as the parliamentarians at committee meetings so it was important they knew it. He will also be doing a presentation on November 7th at 7:30 pm if they cannot go next Tuesday. They can always ask him questions.

Senator Taylor asked if Senator Crupi said yes. It will be in the secretary office and if they all show up they won't fit.

Senator Jordan said in the next committee meetings, they will be asked about the future of each committee; he will send reps from Gov. Ops. to address any changes.

Senator Taylor volunteered and asked where they would be meeting.

Senator H. Jackson will send him the details.

Senator Crooks said Programmer Rocco needed help tomorrow from 2:30-5:30 judging but it must be a senator who is not affiliated with a competing organization.

Dr. Beattie thanked Senator Crupi for helping with Robert's rules. He reminded them to fill out the government assessment. Homecoming events have gone well and have been planned better than anything he had seen; he hoped the rest of the events will go as well. March from the arch will be big. Programming it has been difficult since there are so many moving parts; they deal with the city, the county, alumni, and athletics. President Boone has been very helpful in getting athletics. March from the Arch is his second favorite event, his first being the Club Fair. It is the single event that impacts college retainment the most on the campus and it is put on by ASUN. All those students get involved with their family for the next four years. _____ Will see good things and impressive he was doing that. Once they had their interns, he would need a list of them so he can close the position.

Mr. Boulton said that if anyone wanted to sign up, they should see him.
