There are two new sustainability policies for the month of September- NSHE Clean Up Day, which is going to the Board of Regents, and Campus Clean Up Day, which will be the 3rd weekend of April. Overholser plans to activate students through UNR's Give Pulse to reach 1874 volunteer hours in one day to create a "University feel" and get students out cleaning up and getting more volunteer hours. The second item is that Raul is working on the legislation tracker so that legislation will go onto it. Overholser is the administrator for this so he will be inputting any new policy into this system. If there is any policy that is not on the legislation tracker that should be, send it to him and he will put it on. Raul is also adding a briefs and a comments section for students.

Overholser wants to coordinate with Hannah Jackson to get the word out about the 100-hour Challenge through Give Pulse, so that students get cords at graduation for completing their 100 hours of volunteering.

d. Policy Analyst Brita Romans

Brita Romans read into the record: "Have been working on clean-up day bill, really excited for that. We have some good language and Quinton is gonna reformat it, make some slight adjustments, and then we're gonna send it out.

Really excited for interns! Next step for me is a day of calling people trying to figure out the next steps for the joint commission of Legislative Operations."

e. Projects Director Jake Truscott

Projects Director Truscott is finalizing speakers for the Wolf Pack Smart Talks for 2nd and 4th weeks of October. He plans on them being Tuesdays and plans on reserving the Wells Fargo Auditorium for both dates. The speaker for the first week is Jeffrey Griffin, a prospective doctoral student at the University who teaches International Affairs. The theme is UN Pulse and reaction to global events with regard to Southeast Asia and Western Europe. Truscott's coordinator is still trying to get in contact with Young Dems and Young Reps for the fourth Tuesday of October but they have yet to respond. The goal is to have a Young Politics night that night. Truscott contacted Governor Sandovall and Senator Heller's offices to see if they could come for a Wolf Pack Smart Talk night. Senator Masto cannot come in the fall but will she will try and come in the spring in either February or March. He is also in contact with the office of Charles Blow who is an opinion writer for New York Times. As for events for the rest of the month, Constitution Day is Sunday, September 17th, so there will be a tabling event the following Monday, September 18th. It will be a simple event, mainly just tabling, handing out the Constitution, and spreading the word about what it is. Additionally, September 21st is the first Make your Mark event and the 26th is Voter Registration Day so Truscott will plan something for that day.

Overholser asked to clarify who would be the speakers for the first Smart Talk.

Truscott said that the speakers will be Jeffrey Griffin and hopefully Robert Ostergard- these are two perspectives of the same idea, rather than opposing ideas.

f. Projects Coordinator Carin Irving

Irving reiterated that the first Make your Mark event is September 21st and that Wolf Pack Smart Talks start October 3rd. She said there is also an SEAB meeting on September 20th at 2 pm. She cannot attend but Trustcott will attend in her place. She is also working on a Voter Registration Drive and a Voter Relay idea.
